

BOHUMIR KRYL and his Symphony Orchestra will appear in Martin Wednesday afternoon, October 16 at the Junior College Auditorium. Advance ticket sales indicate that every seat in the hall which will accommodate 1,200 will be taken when the concert starts at 2:30 o'clock. This

Kryl's 50-Piece Symphony Orchestra Comes to Junior College Wednesday, Oct. 16

On Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 16, Bohumir Kryl and his Symphony Orchestra of 50 players will give a concert in the auditorium of the University of Tennessee Junior College. The concert is being sponsored by the All-Students Club of the college and by several clubs in the city; namely the Lions Club, Young Men's Business Club, Fortnightly Club, and the Fine Arts Club. Some other groups are yet to be contacted.

For 40 years Mr. Kryl has enjoyed an enviable record in the field of music. He is recognized as the world's greatest living cornetist and ranks with John Phillip Sousa as one of America's finest band leaders of all times. In 1917 he was commissioned by the United States Government to supervise and train all army bands in various places over the country. As conductor of his own band he has made 35 coast-to-coast tours of the United States in as many years.

Born in Prague, Czechoslovakia, the son of a sculptor, Kryl ran away from home to join a circus at the tender age of 11. In this troupe he played the cornet in the band and was the "boy on the flying trapeze." After two years as a trapeze artist he met with an accident, gave up circus life, and came to America, playing cornet in the ship's orchestra to pay for his passage. For ten years he earned a living as a sculptor, and it was while John Phillip Sousa met him, heard him play the cornet, and engaged him for his cornet soloist. Kryl was then 19. His record since that time is one of consistent progress until now he has his own Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Kryl brings with him as soloists Katherine Landry, well known soprano of the radio, May Hopkins, harpist, and Praveslav Kreh, famous Czech violinist.

The concert will begin promptly at two o'clock and it is hoped that the people of Martin and neighboring communities will avail themselves of this unusual opportunity to hear an internationally famous orchestra. Tickets are seventy-five cents for adults, fifty cents for students of the Junior College, and thirty-five cents for high school and grammar school students. These prices include tax.

Ten Students Will Be Assigned For Training At U. T. Jr. College

Telegraphic instructions from Ed Nilson, CAA official, Atlanta, Ga., Regional Supervisor, were received by the coordinator of the civil pilot training program last Friday to the effect that ten trainees were being assigned to The University of Tennessee Junior College. Mr. Nilson pointed out that temporary records should be kept pending the arrival of new textbooks, new log books, new forms, etc., from Washington.

There has been a rush of students during the week to secure their preliminary physical examination looking toward the possibility of qualifying as one of the trainees. Freshman students are not eligible to participate. The applications have been confined to members of the sophomore class. The academic records of the applicants are being studied carefully. The school officials of the University, the director of flight training, and a government official will collaborate in the final decision as to who the ten trainees will be.

Final instructions have not been received by the coordinator from Washington. The state director of aeronautics stated that these bulletins of instruction had been exhausted and that an additional supply was being printed. Some details of the program must await solution until complete instructions are received.

One interesting question is, "Will young women be admitted to the civil pilot training program this fall?" Ten per cent of the trainees of last fall were permitted to be young women. If the same regulation prevails for the fall program one young lady might be named by the committee which selects the trainees. The young women have exhibited a healthy interest in flying by the number of the applications. All trainees allowed in the program could be filled from the young women alone. Many applications from them have been tentatively filed with the school officials.

A committee from the Chamber of Commerce, the City, and other civic organizations is working diligently to bring the airport field, that is the landing strips, into at least the minimum condition for service. The co-operation of all organizations has been remarkably fine and apparently their efforts have been rewarded by the award of the program. Many details yet remain to be worked out. Much work remains to be done on the field. With all interested people working together it is believed the flight instruction will be under way early next week.

The ground school held its first class in the civil pilot training program on last Tuesday evening. The class met again on Thursday evening. The ground instruction will be offered through the college by members of the University Staff. Prof. S. R. Woods, head of the Agricultural Engineering Department, and Dr. C. W. Bryant, physicist of the institution, will offer all or the major part of the ground school instruction. Instruction will carry through the fall quarter until the Christmas holidays.

This program truly puts Martin and the Junior College up in the air. Here's hoping they make a safe landing.

The Nu Kappa Nu tea was postponed because of the opening of the new flying field on Sunday. It will be held at some later date.

Pre-Med Club Meets

The Pre-Med Club met at Science Building Wednesday evening at 6:45 p. m. The president, Jack Donoho, called the meeting to order and directed business proceedings. A motion was passed that a year book should be edited by the program committee (headed by William Thurmond). Miss Billy Caldwell made a brief talk on the aim and work of the organization. The social for the fall quarter, Nov. 22 was discussed. The following program was given:

Review of "The Smallest Ever." A discussion of the new electron microscope, its principle and its value to the medical profession, by Elmer Overman.

Discussion of the public health pamphlets (issued by Metropolitan Life Insurance) by William Martin.

Inspection of a group of these pamphlets by the club.

Final Enrollment Figures Given by Registrar

With registration now completed, the Registrar's office has been able to compile the actual statistical figures as to enrollment. The total number of students at the Junior College this year is 336. One hundred and ninety of this number are freshmen while 144 are sophomores. There is about the average proportion of men and women, as 195 of the students are men and 141 are women.

The division as to schools is as follows: agriculture—67 freshmen and 51 sophomores; ag. engineering—24 freshmen and 10 sophomores; education—16 freshmen and 20 sophomores; home economics—50 freshmen and 48 sophomores; and liberal arts—35 freshmen and 15 sophomores. All in all, there is a slight increase over last year's total, which in itself is encouraging as to the future enrollments at the Junior College.

Helen Goodwin Interviews NED PENTECOST and DAVID DODSON

Presidents of Sophomore and Freshmen Classes

In David Dodson, there is a personality. But it is not all glowing and vibrating all over his body and sparkling out of his eyes as you usually think of personalities doing. Here, you have a personality that is all jammed up inside and that you sort of have to dig for to find. But once found, you feel well repaid for the trouble of digging, for once found, you've really "got something here."

David Dodson is about medium height, thin, and has blue eyes, and if you are ever able to climb over that little invisible fence which he has around him if you are ever able to walk right in and make yourself at home, you will find that David Dodson has something more than blue eyes—that he's got a real sense of humor and that he's got personality.

David lives in Alamo, where his father is foreman of a bridge crew on the County Road Company. His mother is living, and he has three brothers and sisters, who are all younger than he. He has a sister, 16, a brother, 14, and a small sister who is 10.

Knoxville is his aim after he has learned all the Junior College can teach him, and his ambition is to be a chemical engineer. He hopes to work in a rubber manufacturing plant at Alamo, Ohio, but he has no definite plans for the future—that is, he adds, unless war is declared.

Of his likes? Oh boy! Eating is the biggest thing, and his favorite foods are banana pudding and ice cream. He likes people in general and all sports, of which basketball is his favorite. He also has a yen for hamburgers, and he likes Popeye and malted milks. These, he says, he likes better than anything else, and he drank three a day before he came up here. He also likes the newsreels in picture shows which personally are things of which I could never even very fond.

He doesn't like studying and algebra or squishy or paraboloids (which he says smell like Simpson weeds), and he doesn't like softball very much. He definitely doesn't like lit.

As I gazed into the depths of those honest, straightforward brown eyes—as I looked over the tall, lean figure, and noticed, really noticed for the first time all the features and characteristics of the boy who was so recently honored with the office of president of the sophomore class, there was something—some sort of a something that reminded me of Abe Lincoln. You remember Abe—"Honest Abe," they called him and there was something about Ned that just seemed to sort of fit in with that. I don't know whether it was the high set cheek bones or the determined set of his jaw or just the tallness and the leanness of him—or maybe it was those clear, honest eyes—but somehow or other, I got the impression that there was a likeness between the two. And somehow or other I believe there is.

Of his family, Ned says there isn't so much to tell as it is not a very large one. There are three children besides him, two older and one younger. One of his older brothers, who is working in Nashville, is married and has a small son. The other two brothers are here, one working, and the youngest attending grammar school in Martin. His father and mother are both living, and his father is a letter carrier on the other side of town.

Ned's ambition lies in the field of aviation. He ardently hopes to some day be in the Army Air Corps and perhaps continue on from there until he is safely located in the manufacturing side of airplanes. He is very definitely interested in this aviation course to be offered here at the Junior College. For a long time, he has been wanting it, and now it almost seems too good to be true. He thinks it is one of the greatest things which has happened to this school in a long time.

When asked about his chief likes and dislikes, he replied that his chief like is to have a good time. Besides this, he likes hamburgers and chocolate ice cream cones and likes to loaf. Considering people, he likes everybody—well, almost. Books? Well,

BSU Holds First Meeting

The B. S. U. held its first meeting of the coming school year in the administration building Sept. 30, 1940. Plans were made for the coming year. A nominating committee was appointed to nominate officers to take the place of the old ones who failed to return to our campus.

We were glad to see quite a number of freshmen at our meetings. We wish to urge all Baptists on the campus to attend our meetings.

Paul Meek Speaks To The Milan Exchange

Paul Meek, executive officer of the University of Tennessee Junior College, spoke before the Milan Exchange Club at their regular meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 2.

Mr. Meek's topic was timely and important in a day when toughness of fiber is demanded of people generally, being a discussion of the value of farm training in the building of character, and the formation of habits of diligence and strength from association with things of the soil. There is much, Mr. Meek said, in common between the discipline of farm life and the training for military defense, for both bring out character in the individual.

Jr. College Group Attend Conference at Nashville

Four members of the Junior College faculty, comprising a large proportion of the important curriculum of the college, accompanied Mr. Meek to Nashville on Wednesday, Oct. 9, when he visited Nashville for the conference on junior college terminal education at the southern meeting of the group.

This conference is sponsored by the General Education Board, which has set aside the sum of $25,000 for the purpose of promoting work and study in the junior college field. Paul Meek, executive officer of the Junior College, always alert to any movement that will promote the usefulness of the local college, is a member of the conference; and the four who accompany him carry the same desire to improve the junior college work.

Those going with Mr. Meek were Miss Burney, librarian; Mrs. Myrtle Phillips, registrar; and Professors S. R. Woods and George Horton.

Girls Make Air Poster

The artistic poster you observed in the library bulletin board at the Junior College during the last few days was designed and executed by two students, Lucile Nolen and Dorothy Corley. The Volette compliments these two gifted young artists, and we hear that Mr. Meek was highly gratified over their contribution to the CPT program.

Little Vols Bow To The Southwestern Frosh In Hard Fought Battle

The Southwestern University frosh ran rampant over the University of Tennessee Junior Vols last Friday night, 33-6 in the initial game of the 1940 football season. The Bobcats, displaying a brilliant running game and a steady defense, scored three times in the second quarter and twice in the fourth to account for their 33 points.

The Vols got away to a flying start when Boyd returned a punt to the So-Western two-yard stripe and Easley took the ball across after three efforts. That climaxed the Vol scoring. They threatened several times in the second half, once when Boswell snagged the pigskin thrown from the hands of Easley, and again when a penalty carried the ball half way down to the goal. The Junior squad held the opposing foe scoreless for the first quarter.

The Memphis team made 21 points in the second period. Early in the second quarter, after a series of passes and runs, the Yearlings scored. The scoring parade was begun by Boling. A few minutes later Lewels blocked a Vol punt and Knight recovered on the Vol eight with Boling going over two plays later. The third touchdown resulted from a 12-yard pass by St. Charles to Knight.

Dowdle led the Frosh on a 45-yard attack by a series of runs. Williams hit the line for the fourth touchdown. Holland, the ex-Central High ace, hit the weak side tackle for the last touchdown.

Southwestern proved to have a superior team in several ways, but the spirit of the "Baby" Vols stands alone. Boyd, quarterback, was hurt early in the game. He suffered an injured knee.

Managers of Girls' Intramural Teams Announced

The battle of the colors is on again. The plan of dividing the student body into eight intramural teams which was so successful last year is again being followed, and during the past week the Sophomore members have elected managers for the year. Too, they have drawn from the new Freshmen sufficient people to fill out the vacancies on the teams caused by graduation last year. The newly elected managers of the girls' teams are:

Blue	Juanita Ward
Green	Agnes Logan
Red	Gene Cohen
Brown	Margaret McLean
Orange	LaRue Pentecost
Black	Barbara Bean
Yellow	Doris Bell
White	Clarene Dyer

The first tournament which the girls' teams will engage in this year will be horseshoes. Entries for this event were turned in Saturday, and from all appearances a successful season, with a good show of enthusiasm and sportsmanship is under way.

The complete list of the new boys' managers is not yet complete.

Faculty Student Reception Enlivens Opening Week

By HELEN GOODWIN

On Saturday night of Sept. 28, the faculty held its annual reception and tea to which all U. T. Junior College students were invited. As you entered the Home Economics Building, where the affair was held, there were a group of sophomore girls who greeted you and offered to take your wraps. After this was dispensed with, you were led to a table where one sophomore girl printed your name on a card and another one pinned it on your dress or coat lapel.

Then you entered the room to the right and began the "how-do-you-do's." Mr. Phillips and Mr. Meek were the first two in line, however, and they greeted you so cordially and so jovially that, really, you felt like relaxing a little bit and trying to enjoy yourself. You passed from teacher to teacher to wives of the teachers, and if you were a sophomore you expressed your delight and joy at seeing them again. Or if you were a freshman, you murmured, "how-do-you-do" to the ones you didn't know and when you came to the one you did know—no matter how slightly, you wanted to throw your arms about his neck, you felt so glad to see a familiar face.

At last you were through with the long line of faculty members and their wives and as you passed out the door you decided that it wasn't an ordeal at all—that really you enjoyed it. If you were a sophomore, you really enjoyed seeing them all again—yes, you really did. If you were a freshman you decided that it was rather nice to see the ones you knew and that it was a grand opportunity to meet the ones you didn't know.

By this time you had strolled thru the living room and were being served punch and wafers in the dining room. Passing on to the court again, you stood and sipped your punch and munched your wafer and chatted with your friends about how nice it all was.

At last a sophomore girl came and took away your empty cup and you moved on with your group of friends into another room at the far end of the court where much laughter and sounds of amusement were being heard. At this door, too, you were greeted by faculty members' wives and then you turned to the shifting, laughing, talking mass of students and in a moment, someone was shrieking, "Here's Miss So-and-so" and everyone began peering at your card to see what your name was and pumping your hand up and down, and you were laughing and looking at other peoples' cards to try to see who every body was.

After so much of this, you decided it was time to go. Besides you had some studying you needed to do, so you said your goodbyes and went back in the sewing room after your coat. As you and your friends or your "friend" walked home through the chilly fall night, you discussed over and over how much nicer it was than you had thought it would be and what a very nice time you had, after all.

spring lists of the Bobbs-Merrill Co., Mr. Kroll's publishers. After final revisions and suggested changes have been made in the manuscript, Kroll expects to send the finished book in by November.

A S C Offers Prizes To Clubs

Since the principal aim of the All Students' Club Council is to work for better organization and accomplishment in all the clubs on the campus, new ways of stimulating interest and activity are continually sought by this body. In the Council's first meeting of the year, held Monday night, Sept. 30, Mr. Knepp suggested a means whereby the clubs might become interested in presenting better programs at their regular meeting. In accordance, the Council voted to purchase a plaque which shall have engraved on it each quarter the name of the club which presents the best program plan for the entire quarter. These plans are to be turned in, some two or three weeks after the beginning of the quarter, and will be judged by some disinterested party. The plaque will probably be placed in one of the cases in the front hall of the Administration Building. Every club on the campus is eligible in this competition and all club officers are urged to begin work on this project from the start.

he said, although it might sound like he was trying to "stand in" with one of the faculty, he liked "Keepers of the House" very much. He thought it was really good.

One thing he doesn't mind that a lot of men don't like is women's hats! He says they don't bother him at all, but he doesn't like prunes and people who try to "show off." He says he guesses that is his chief dislike—the people who "show off."

His favorite movie actress is—you guessed it, Myrna Loy. I didn't ask him why; hat's always so obvious. His favorite actor is Errol Flynn, who is the idol of every boy from six to 60. He says the best show he has seen in a long time is "I Love You Again," and he thinks it would do everybody good to see it. A good book that he recently read was "King's Row," but he couldn't remember the author.

For recreation, he likes tennis, bowling, shows, books, swimming and nearly all sports.

When he was elected president of our sophomore class, he says he was utterly dumbfounded and that he had had no idea whatsoever of receiving such an honor. He doesn't have any particular plans yet for the sophomores, except those for our Fall Social, but he hopes to make that a "howling success."

And somehow we feel that this tall, lean boy, who reminds us in some obscure way of old Abe Lincoln, will make a "howling success"—not only of the Fall Social, but of being president of our sophomore class. And not only of being president of our sophomore class but pretty nearly everything he sets that determined looking face to do. And we are willing to give him our cooperation and loyalty and our best wishes always.

Librarian Gives Instruction On Use Of Library

Miss Burney, librarian, has put in a number of heavy hours speaking to all the freshmen sections on the use of the library. She has been heard by Mr. Farrar's two groups, Mr. Kroll's four sections and Mr. Allen's two sections.

In one day Miss Burney spoke to four of the classes. It was important for her to get to Nashville for the meeting there, and by the end of the fourth hour she was weary but happy. Miss Burney never actually tires in well doing when it serves to extolling the values and virtues of her library.

ler or Shakespearian works.

His favorite movie actor, too, is Errol Flynn, and his favorite actress is Olivia De Havilland. His favorite books are "Grapes of Wrath" and "Gone With the Wind."

As for recreation, his favorite is basketball. But reading—well, it has to be a rainy day before he will like to read, because he just can't stand to stay in the house while the sun is shining. He likes shows well enough, but he says he is about to get tired of them. He worked at a theater for five years and only missed four shows in all that time. Probably the most outstanding picture he has ever seen he thinks is "Kentucky."

His ideal, his model, his idol—or whatever you may call it, is Glen Cunningham. When I innocently asked if this was perhaps one of the good citizens of Alamo, I was very patiently told that Glen Cunningham is the champion mile runner of the world. Imagine! To me, was then related a brief story of Glen Cunningham, which I unselfishly pass on to you. When Mr. Cunningham was only 14 years old, he was told by doctors that he would never walk again because of some very bad burns which he had received. But by training himself strenuously, he became the fastest mile runner of the world. David says that any one who has that much fight deserves to be admired, and I certainly agree with him. Never again, even innocently, will I show disrespect for the name of Glen Cunningham. In fact, I even think I'll make him my own idol or ideal or whatever you call it.

When I asked him if there had ever been any heroes or famous people in his family, he replied that he didn't guess so, unless maybe it was one of his great granddaddies who fought in the Civil War and got one of his toes shot off. (I told you he had a sense of humor).

Being president is no new experience for him. He was president of his high school class in '36 in the 9th grade. He was also elected president in the 10th and 12th grades, but resigned because he was manager of the athletic department and since he wouldn't have time for both, he chose to be manager. However, he was quite surprised at his election here, and did not in the least expect it. But he does consider it a very great honor and says earnestly that he will do his very best at it. And I don't know but I believe that David's best will be pretty dog-gone good. Don't you?

Vols Overwhelmed by
STC by Score of 45 to 6

The University of Tennessee Junior Vols were defeated in their third game of the season last Friday night at Murfreesboro by a score of 45 to 6.

The Junior Vols, defeated by Southwestern Frosh and Memphis Teachers Frosh, had hoped to break the jinx against the Middle Tennessee Frosh. Little was known about the Teachers Frosh, and the coaches knew nothing of the opponents' style.

Due to an injured back, Coach Hug was unable to make the trip. Mrs. Hug went along to assist in any way she could.

Although the Vols suffered defeat on the field, their spirit and loyalty for their Alma Mater can never be defeated. Throughout the game the Vols put their all into the battle, fighting for their school. The school is still for them. Such spirit is typical of a volunteer.

The Baby Vols journey to Clarksville next Friday for their fourth game of the season. The next home game will be Oct. 25.

Here and There

Seems like the students are quite interested in this Kyril orchestra business. I believe we're all going to go for it in a big way.

Have you noticed our trees around the campus? Aren't they pretty with their colors all changing from green to gold and rust and brown and tan. Nature has a pretty good eye for color, if you ask me.

Who was the boy in school yesterday who had the baby squirrel stowed away in his jacket?

Mr. Phillips' psychology class was sorely disappointed when he showed up the other day.

That little old ping pong ball is terribly busy these days going back and forth and back and forth. There are always a gang over there in line to play, too.

I think the whole dormitory decided to go home, when it was learned that the Nu Kappa Tea was to be put off.

That football game between Martin High and Grove High the other night was really a hovey. Martin was plenty scared there for a minute though.

Jean Callen says these Nursery School children are sweet and lovable and all that, but sometimes it seems like there are a few too many of them.

Teachers Frosh, 19 To 7;
U-T Scores Late in Game

Displaying a powerful second half scoring punch, the West Tennessee State Teachers College Frosh overpowered the U. T. Junior Vols, 19-7 here last Friday night. After being outplayed in a scoreless first half the Teachers Frosh settled down to business and pushed over three touchdowns to the Vols one. Late in the third quarter the Teachers opened up a powerful aerial attack that took the ball deep into Vol territory from where Radvansky took it over. That was all of the scoring until the fourth quarter. Combining a powerful running game with their already deadly aerial attack the Frosh counted twice more in the fourth quarter to run their total to 19 points. Maxwell was responsible for both the Teachers fourth quarter touchdowns. It wasn't until the last two minutes of play that the Junior Vols scored. Vowell covered a Frosh fumble and the passing combination, Craney to Bell, scored a few plays later. Craney kicked the extra point.

Nu Kappa Nu Postpones
Tea—Date Announce Late

On Sunday, Oct. 13, the Nu Kappa Nu will give a formal tea for the entire faculty and student body of the U. T. Junior College. The hours will be from three to six p. m., and the

ON THE CAMPUS

It was too bad, Loretta, that when high score was 288, the highest you could bowl was 284.

Grace Murphy says that if you want to make high score at a game of bowling, it is absolutely necessary that you play with her. Both Colleen Terry, last week, and Loretta Moore, week before last, were playing with her when they achieved the high score mark.

So Wayne Oxford breezed in Saturday morning. Pretty nice surprise, eh Colleen?

Christine Landrum is some cute—don't you think so, Lacy?

All those bands at the Martin High game the other night were some stuff, especially the one from Clinton.

Wallace Crowe has hit on a new name of Helen Goodwin. It is "Betty Boop."

When better themes on Beowulf are written these sophomores will write them. They'll probably have to when all those napers come oack with saucy little E's stamped right on the front of them.

Lissa Cook says her very favorite piece—almost, is "Tuxedo Junction."

Mary Louise Carroll says, if you ever hear a terrible noise and the administration sounds like it is coming down, you may just conclude that Mr. Allen has called on her to speak in the Public Speaking class and she has fainted!

What's this we hear about Jake Cocke in Botany Class the other day, drawing a leaf so natural looking that when a little breeze came along, it just blew away.

"Mr. Horton" can spin more yarns than Andy Gump. He has had some sort of long drawn out experience connected with every subject one mentions.

tea will be given in the living room of the Girls' Residence Hall. There will be a general program of music, and all residents of the Girls' Residence Hall will act as attendants.

Paul Meek Attends Conference

Paul Meek, executive officer, will represent the University of Tennessee Junior College when thirty-one Junior Colleges in Tennessee and Kentucky convene at Nashville on Oct. 9. The conference is called by J. E. Burk of Ward-Belmont for the purpose of discussing courses in two-year colleges, a field of education that Mr. Meek has taken a leading part in since his association with junior college administration. Special attention will be given to vocational education. In this field Mr. Meek is an acknowledged authority.

Among the noted people that Mr. Meek will be associated with in the conference are Walter C. Eells of Washington, secretary of the American Assn. of Junior Colleges, Deak S. Campbell, of Peabody College, the president of Ward-Belmont, and others of outstanding leadership in the South.

Ten Trainees for CTP
Course Are Announced

During the past few weeks at the Junior College a great deal of attention has been focused on the preliminaries to the C T P course which will be offered there. Since only ten persons could take the training, there has been considerable speculation as to which of the numerous applicants would be selected. The selection will probably come from the following boys.

Robert Bratton of Duck River; Harold Hoffman, Martin; Harry H. Kroll, Jr., Martin; Wallace Crowe, Charlotte; Herbert Dycus, Dyersburg; Harry Deaton, Alamo; William Garrott, Somerville; Ned Pentecost, Martin; Max Harper, Lafayette; and James Glasgow of Dresden and David Moore of Bolivar.
